OLD BUILDINGS FALL TO STREET

Consternation Reigns On Mair Street When Structures Partially Collapse.

A CHILD'S NARROW ESCAPE

Father Snatched Daughter From Path of Falling Bricks.

Consternation reigned for a few minutes in the vicinity of Seventeenth and Main Streets about 9 o'clock last night, owing to the partial collapse of three brick buildings, each three stories high, at and adjoining the northwest corner of Seventeenth and Main. Although one of the houses, which was occupied by Alexander Berman, his mether, wife and five children, partially fell, and several persons were on the pavement just in Front, no one was injured, though Mr. Berman was struck on the head by a small fragment of brick.

"I had just sent my little girl upstairs with my coat, and she came running down and told me that the windows were shaking and the curtains falling down like the house was rocking. I ran upstairs and found the ceiling swaying, and that a part of the wall had fallen in, and lost no time in leaving the place. Part of the side wall had fallen in, and Part of the side wall had fallen in, and I do not know what damage was done to my furniture. One of my children had just asked me to walk up the street with her a little way, and but for that I would have been upstairs with my family, and we would probably have been killed. Just after I got out, I heard the noise of falling walls and that pile of bricks fell into the street.

It was in the shape of a genuine Western exclone with the rain and hall thrown in. The fury of the storm was confined principally to the town and immediate vicinity. The town presented a picture of destruction this morning. The benutiful shade trees were torn all to pieces, with the follage cut and strewn all over the town so thick as to cover the ground. The hall lasted for ten inhutes. There were two hall storms, one following immediately after the other from a different direction.

pose of any other business that may properly come before it.
Great interest attaches to this meeting of the committee for the reason that it will fix the date of the State primary, agree upon the assessment of candidates to meet the expenses, and fix the hours and arrange all other details as to pay of judges and elerks, etc. Considerable difference of opinion may arise as to the date of the primary and as to whether judges may be secured to serve, without pay. It was the idea of the committee when the primary plan was first devised in 1902 that judges could be secured who would serve without pay, and thus reduce the burden of the candidates.

MANASSAS, VA., June 5.—Governo Montague made the first political speech be ever made in Prince William county herd to-day. He spoke for one hour and a half to a crowd of interested listeners, who packed the court room. Judge Nichol adjourned court at 12:30 o'clock, in order to give Governor Montague the court room. Nearly the whole of the Governor's speech was taken up on a discussion of the primary system of electing United States officers. He was particularly harsh in his criticism of certain United States senators, who have been convicted of accepting bribes from the trusts, and in reply to a statement made by Senator Martin that Montague's influence in the United States Senate would be very light if he should he elected if he does not stop abusing the present members of that body, Governor Montague declared that he did not care to exert any influence with crooks and senators who are willing to sell their country's interests to the highest bidder. Governor Montague denied certain alleged attacks upon Senator Martin's character, and said that he had criticised the nor's speech was taken up on a discus

Senator Martin, said Governor Montague, has made no effort to carry out the wishes of his party, but now that he has opposition he has jumped on the tall-board of the wagon and declared that he has at all time been a people's man, and has ever endeavored to adhere to their will and desires.

election of senators by the voters had never expressed himself as favoring the election of senators by the voters at large.

Governor Montague touched on the subject of trusts, and declared that the great question of monopolies and their evils could never be settled by a senator from Virginia or any other State getting an appropriation for a church, a school or a harbor. The funior senator, he said, has either gotten less appropriations than his collectues or the other senators had gotten practically none at all. Governor Montague declared himself in favor of trate regulations, and said that Mr. Martin seemed to favor it out of Congress, but whenever the question was raised in that body he was always dead against it.

Governor Montague always referred to Senator Martin as the junior senator, and while he did severely criticise and attack his record, pothing was said that could be construed as a personal attack. Governor Montague has many friends and supporters in this section.
